This monthly review and feature magazine features international and national coverage of the press with some emphasis on Washington, D.C. Feature profiles on journalists, and articles on trends and ethics are also included.

American Literature

Quarterly

Duke University Press

This well-established scholarly journal was the first to devote itself exclusively to the study of American literature. In cooperation with the American Literature Section of the Modern Language Association of America, it publishes critical, scholarly, historical, and bibliographical articles on all periods of American literature. Essays in issues examined tended to focus on unifying themes and on the relationship between culture, society, politics, and literature.

American Theatre

Monthly

Theatre Communications Group, Inc.

Each issue features reports on plays in print, performances, and theater season schedules in the US and abroad. Includes full-length play scripts five times per year. This is a good, commercially produced publication that tries to give an overview of trends and happenings in the nonprofit American Theater scene. Although there is inevitably a slight New York bias, the magazine still has countrywide applicability.

Annals of the American Academy of Political & Social Science

Bi-monthly

Sage Publications, Inc.

Provides an interdisciplinary discussion of problems and policy issues affecting America and the world community.

Art in America

Monthly

J

Journal of Advertising

Quarterly

M.E. Sharpe, Inc.

Contributes to the development of advertising theory and its relationship to advertising practices and processes. This journal cleaves closely to the classic academic model: The articles are all well footnoted and abstracted. They are very theoretical with extensive use of statistics and well-defined methodologies.

Journal of Democracy

Quarterly

The Johns Hopkins University Press

Devoted to highly academic treatises on democracy and democratic institutions and processes, including democratic theory, the history of democracy, elections, human rights, individual country studies, the relationship between economic development and democracy, and democratic movements against authoritarian regimes. Theme issues have been devoted to "Civil Society after Communism" and "On Democratic Consolidation." A "Documents on Democracy" section in each issue covers dissident movements, the actions of human rights groups, and related activities. There has been increasing coverage of East European and former Soviet nations in their struggles to grapple with democratic forms of government and the political-party process that accompanies democratic reforms.

Journal of Marketing

Bi- monthly

American Marketing Association

Designed to bridge the gap between marketing theory and application. This official publication of the American Marketing Association includes research articles that must provide a practical link to an application. Articles must be theoretically sound, provide new information or a fresh insight into an unsolved problem, and benefit both practitioners and academicians. Articles tend to be thoughtful, well researched, and interesting. This is a core title for any academic library that supports business, especially marketing education programs.
